FOREST FIRES

More than $5,000,000.00 of forest products were destroyed in West Virginia during the year 1908 by forest fires. To prevent this destruction the legislature of 1908 enacted a law.

It is now unlawful—For any person to build a fire, or use an abandoned fire, in a field, public or private road, or adjacent to, or in any woods or forests of this state, unless such fire is totally extinguished before leaving same.

To negligently set on fire any fields, woods or lands in this State, so as to thereby occasion loss, damage or injury to another person; the fine is not less than $50.00 nor more than $500.00, and in the discretion of the court giving same a jail sentence may be imposed not to exceed one year.

To unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any woods, fields, grass, straw or other thing capable of spreading fire on lands; the fine is not to exceed $100.00, and a jail sentence of not less than two nor more than twelve months; and any person injured thereby, or in consequence thereof, may recover double the amount of damages sustained.

To wilfully set on fire any woods, fields or lands within this State, not your own, so as to thereby occasion damage or injury to any other person, constitutes a felony, punishable by confinement in the penitentiary for not less than one nor more than five years.

Railroad Companies.—The law requires all railroad companies to remove all inflammable material from their right-of-way, to provide all locomotives with netting of steel or iron wire to prevent the escape of sparks and fire from the smoke stacks, and adequate devices to prevent the escape of fire from ash pans and furnaces.

CAPT. A. M. EDGAR

It is said in God's Word of the righteous that "thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age, like as a shock of grain cometh in its season." In this there is of course the idea of ripeness, or fitness, and of home-bringing. How appropriate is this thought today when we gather about all that remains of the earthly tabernacle of this father, husband and friend. The years have been rounded out to him and the ripening being completed, it is most fitting that he should be taken into the garner of God. God thus comes in his infinite wisdom and takes his servant as the husbandman comes at harvest time, takes the sheaf and places it in the storehouse. We are not here, then, today to stand aghast at the strangeness of God's providence but to pay tribute to the richness of his mercy in filling up the measure of the days of our friend. All the processes of growth and maturity are complete and God blesses him by taking him into the heavenly garner as a ripened sheaf. It seems to me that the sentiment which the poet Tennyson expressed with reference to his own death is the appropriate one on an occasion like this:

"Sunset and evening bell,
And after that the dark,
And may there be no moanings of farewell
When I embark;
For though from out our bourne of time and space
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar."

Alfred M. Edgar was born July 10, 1837 in the home occupied by his ancestors several generations before him at Edgar's Mill, Greenbrier County. His parents were Archie Edgar and his wife Nancy and stock raiser. To this union were born five children, all surviving—Mrs. F. R. Hill, of Marlinton; Mrs. H. W. McNeel, of Academy; A. P. Edgar, Esq., of Marlinton; and Mr. George and Miss Rachel Edgar, at home.

Capt. Edgar's dominant traits were his meekness of spirit and his unshaken faith in his fellowman. He was modest to a fault and his own natural modesty was nurtured by the habit he had of always exalting others above himself. I never knew him to speak even critically of any one. Whatever faults he may have seen in his fellowman were always cast into the background of shade as the sunlight of his praise fell upon their virtues. Peace he loved and peace he would live at almost any cost. After knowing him, it always impressed me that his nature was in strange contrast to the popular notion of the ideal soldier. That so quiet, modest, peace-loving a man should have won the record for bravery and daring that remains to his credit as a soldier upsets many of our favorite ideas, but yet it is in keeping with the true psychology of bravery. Not the blustering braggart but the quiet, sturdy, faithful soul makes the bravest and most dependable soldier. These traits were the secret of his long and honorable service as a soldier as they were the key-note of his after life.

I need not speak of his life as a neighbor, friend, and citizen. It is so well known that nothing I could say would add anything to the sum of it. Since his illness and the inevitable issue of it became known there has been heard only universal regret that such a man would soon be taken from among us. He had been in declining health for a long time and bravely, even honorably fought remove all inflammable material from their right-of-way, to provide all locomotives with netting of steel or iron wire to prevent the escape of sparks and fire from the smoke stacks, and adequate devices to prevent the escape of fire from ash pans and furnaces, and to employ in seasons of drought and before vegetation has revived in the spring, sufficient trackmen to put out fires on its right-of-way. Engineers, conductors or trainmen discovering or knowing of fires in fences, or other material along right-of-way of the railroad shall report same at the first station, to the station agent, and such station agent shall forthwith notify the nearest fire warden, and use all necessary means to extinguish same. Any employee or officer of a railroad company violating any such provisions shall be fined not less than $20.00 nor more than $200.00.

Fire Wardens.—The Forest, Game and Fish Warden is ex-officio fire warden of the State, and all deputy wardens are deputy fire wardens for their respective counties.

In Case of Fire.—Notify some deputy warden, or if none is near summon help and extinguish the fire yourself, and proper blanks will be furnished you by the state warden on which to make your report.

Be Careful with Fire.—Be careful with matches, cigars, pipes, and all devices calculated to set out fires. The time to control a fire is before it is started. "A stitch in time saves nine" is true of forest fires. Fire is the most dangerous element in nature.

All citizens in West Virginia should join in a crusade to lessen this element of destruction to our forests. Any assistance or help you can give to prevent or stop these fires, or any information as violations of this statute will be greatly appreciated. Wire or write

Alfred M. Edgar was born July 10, 1837 in the home occupied by his ancestors several generations before him at Edgar's Mill, Greenbrier County. His parents were Archie Edgar and his wife Nancy who was a Miss Paris. He attended the school in Lewisburg founded and conducted by Dr. McElhenny. On reaching maturity he remained on his father's farm until the outbreak of the Civil War when he enlisted in May 1861 in Company E, 27th Regiment. His Regiment afterward was attached to the command which became famous under the name of the "Stonewall Brigade". He was a brave and faithful soldier and enthusiastically followed the fortunes of that celebrated Brigade in the brilliant campaigns of their incomparable leader, "Stonewall Jackson, in the forced marches, the rapid flanking movements and the bold charges that were characteristic of his generalship. He was wounded in the battle of Fort Republic on the 8th of June, 1863 and in addition to that wound. He carried with him to his grave evidences of the rapid marches made by Jackson's "foot cavalry."

Mr. Edgar passed through the various degrees of promotion until in September, 1863, he became captain of his company. He was in all the important engagements in which the "Stonewall" Brigade took part until the battle of the Wilderness. During those days he was in the forefront of the hard-pressed forces of Lee until the severe engagement that raged at the "Bloody Angle," as it is called by the soldiers of the South, and the Salient, as it is called by the historians of the war. The Stonewall Brigade, veterans of Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville and Antietam, were defendants of the Salient, and against them Grant hurled division after division. Burnside's corps in irresistible numbers swept across the defense of the Confederate within the "Bloody Angle" and captured four thousand prisoners and Lee's field batteries. Among the number of prisoners taken was Capt. Edgar. This was on May, 12, 1864. He was taken to Ft. Delaware and remained there until the retaliatory measures of the North were put in operation, when among six hundred officers he was exposed to the fire of Confederate guns on Morris Island, near Charleston, S. C. On the 17th of June 1865, he was released from prison, and sick and and the inevitable issue of it became known there has been heard only universal regret that such a man would soon be taken from among us. He had been in declining health for a long time and bravely, even hopefully, fought against the inevitable. He made a profession of religion in 1861 about the time he entered the army, but did not unite with the church until later. During 38 years he had lived in this community he had not missed. Communion service until his last illness.

During his long illness I visited him frequently and never saw anyone more appreciative of, or more grateful for spiritual help and counsel. He was outspoken in his declaration of faith in his Redeemer. He was too well grounded in the principles of our religion to doubt the Savior's mercy or capacity to save all who put their trust in him and he knew that he trusted Him, yet it was hard for him to overcome his natural modesty and reserve and declare his absolute assurance of salvation. But we know that God does not make our assurance of salvation the test of our acceptance with Him. So far as human frailty is able to judge the evidences of his faith was unmistakable. We therefore sorrow not today as those who have no hope. His pastor will miss the presence that when he was well was scarcely ever absent from church. The family will miss the quiet unassuming spirit that guided them so long with his quiet counsel. The community will miss one who was always ready and willing to lend a helping hand to all in need. Many hearts will go out in sympathy for those most deeply concerned in his death.

During his absence his father and mother had died and the feeble and discouraged soldier came home to find a lonely hearthstone and new economic conditions. Like thousands of returned veterans he addressed himself resolutely to the task of conserving the shattered fortunes of the family and adjusting himself to the changed condition that the war had brought. He lived quietly in Greenbrier county until June, 1875, when he took the important step of marrying Miss Lydia, the daughter of Col. Paul McNeel, and thereafter took up his residence in the Little Levels of Pocahontas county, there to spend the remaining years of life in the quiet pursuits of farmer

Mr. Burr H. Simpson
State Road Commissioner

Charleston, W. Va.

Dear Mr. Simpson:

Relative to the conversation you and I had Friday, April 9, concerning naming the overhead bridge at Ronceverte the "Thomas A. Edgar Bridge," I am giving below the chief known facts of the life of this pioneer. This data is largely verified by records of the county court of Greenbrier and titles at the Richmond Land Office. A few items were secured from such works as Dunmore's War by Thwaites and Kellogg and The Annals of Southwest Virginia by Summers. A small portion is family tradition, which in this particular case I consider reliable.

That Thomas A. Edgar was the first settler on the site of present Ronceverte has never to my knowledge been denied. The river bottom land there was granted to him by the state of Virginia and was in possession of the family until this century, at which time it was necessary to clear the title through the Land Office records at Richmond.

The first permanent settlement in Greenbrier County was made in 1769, and Edgar must have settled there within the next two or three years since he went from there to the Battle of Point Pleasant which was fought October 10, 1774. What is now Greenbrier County was then included in Botetourt, and on this occasion he was a private in Capt. John Lewis' company of volunteers from Botetourt County. The rest of this company all seem to have been already settled in present Greenbrier and Monroe. He is listed in The Annals of Southwest Virginia as a Revolutionary soldier and is listed by Reddy as having also rendered "non-military" service.

Thomas A. Edgar and his son Archer built and operated the first mill, which was also the first industry, on the Greenbrier River. According to family tradition the first mill was burned by Indians and a new one built for which the mill-stones were imported from France. This was often done at that time. The place became known as Edgar's Mill and is often mentioned by that name in the county court records. There was only a small settlement there until the coming of the lumber business in 1872 and not until then did the town grow up which was named Ronceverte.

There was only a small settlement there until the coming of the lumber business in 1872 and not until then did the town grow up which was named Ronceverte.

Edgar was rather prominent in county politics. He was first county surveyor, 1780-1784. In 1788, he was made "under" sheriff and the next year his name appears as one of the justices composing the county court. He was a fairly active member of the court until his resignation, which was probably shortly before the end of the 18th century. For many years he was a trustee of the town of Lewisburg and he served the county in various other minor capacities.

The date of his birth was about 1750, but of his birth-place I am uncertain. He died at the age of 72 and is buried at the Old Stone Church cemetery at Lewisburg. His wife was Anne Matthews, the daughter of Archer and Letitia (McClanahan) Matthews. Two of his grandsons played prominent parts in the War Between The States. One was Maj. George Edgar, commander of the "Edgar Battalion," and the other was Capt. Alfred Malory Edgar, an officer in the "Stonewall" Brigade. Many of his descendants are now in West Virginia, some of them prominent.

The above, I believe, about covers the facts of his life, as I know them. I discussed this matter briefly with Mr. Roy Bird Cook Saturday. As you probably know he generally heartily approves such projects as this. The only precedent for this sort of action that he could think of was perhaps the Patrick Street Bridge here in Charleston.

We feel sure that you will agree with us that this pioneer settler deserves the honor, that you can do him by giving his name to the fine new bridge on the site of his home and farm. I have made clear to everyone concerned your reasonable attitude in regard to public expense in this matter and I can assure you that the expenditure of any of the state's funds will not be requested. If it is desired at some future time to hold some kind of a ceremony and fasten a small plaque to the bridge at private expense, that permission can be secured.

Personally appreciate very much your kindness and I assure you that the people of Ronceverte and Thomas A. Edgar's descendants everywhere will be deeply grateful for your action.

Very truly yours,

Isaac McNeel

Dear Mr. McNeel:

This will acknowledge receipt and thank you for your letter of April 13, 1937, having further reference to the proposed naming of the Overhead structure at Ronceverte.

In accordance with your suggestion, further consideration of this matter will be held in abeyance until the sentiment of the City Council of Ronceverte, as well as any other interested bodies or individuals, may be ascertained.

Dear Mr. Simpson:

Since writing the enclosed letter, giving the main facts of Thomas Edgar's life, I have talked to Judge George W. McClintic, who is also an Edgar descendant.

Judge McClintic is of the opinion, and I agree with him, that action on your part should be delayed until it can be arranged for the city council at Ronceverte to make some kind of a resolution or motion showing that they approve and will cooperate. Both of us at this time are rather in the dark as to the reaction of the officials and prominent people of that section to this move.

A short delay will also give those interested time to perfect plans regarding a dedicatory ceremony and a plaque or tablet to be placed on the bridge. I am, however, sending you my letter of April 12 so that you can have at hand the information it contains.

Very truly yours,

Isaac McNeel

Dear Ike: I got your letter and appreciate your efforts very much however you needn't go to so much trouble as it is not so important. Mr. Price says that he expects it was the pension lists of Revolutionary soldiers that Andy was looking and I am of the same opinion since I think about it. They were not listed by companies but alphabetically and after each name was the county of his residence and the organization in which he served. In the same list Joshua Buckley the pioneer was listed as a resident of Augusta County but his company was from Fredrick or Culpepper county and McNeill was listed as a resident of Hardy county and his service with George Roger Clark. Mr. Ewing for whom I am trying to get this record has the service record of John McNeel at Hillsboro and Jacob ~~McNeel~~ Irason McNeill with Stuart and Arbuckle at Point Pleasant from pension lists at Washington so if the pension lists of the Revolution was not what we were looking I don't what it could have been.

Sincerely,

THE EDGAR FAMILY

Captain Thomas Edgar was born in Bedford county, Virginia, in the year 1754. His father was George Edgar and his mother Elizabeth Edgar. At maturity he entered Washington's Army and rose to the rank of Captain. He was with Washington at Yorktown when Lord Cornwallis surrendered his British forces. About the close of the Revolution he married Ann Matthews. He moved to Lewisburg by 1780, where he kept an "ordinary" until 1791. He bought the old Edgar Homestead at Edgar's Mills, where Ronceverte now stands. Dyer's Index shows that the following grants were made to Thomas Edgar: four hundred acres, Rich Creek, in 1785; two hundred seventy acres, Rich Creek, in 1785; one hundred forty-two acres, Burns Creek, in 1797; eighty-three acres, Spring Creek, in 1809; nine hundred thirty acres adjoining Holesapple in 1801. These grants were made in Greenbrier County. There was also a grant of nine thousand three hundred thirty acres on the Kanawha River in Montgomery county in 1797.

"At Court of Quarter Session Begun and Held for the County of Greenbrier August 27, 1784, Thomas Edgar comes into this court and resigns his office of surveyor of the county - " (Record Book of Greenbrier County)

Thomas Edgar had been appointed to this office by the president and professors of the College of William and Mary and was the first surveyor of Greenbrier county. He did, under an act of the Legislature of Virginia, survey a forty-acre square for a town out of the heart of the Savannah to be called Lewisburg. The square was divided into half-acre lots and sold.

He was a trustee of Libert Hall Academy, afterwards Washington College, now Washington and Lee University, in 1784. He was Deputy Sheriff under William Renick, then High Sheriff.

In the session of the Assembly of Virginia, begun October 18 and ending December 29, 1790, Thomas Edgar was a member from Greenbrier County.

He died in the year 1822 and was buried at the Old Stone Church. His wife died in 1852 at Mill Point and was buried beside her husband.

Archer Matthews Edgar, son of Thomas, married Nancy H. Leavis in Giles county Virginia on January 25, 1832.

Alfred Mallory Edgar was born at Edgar's Mills July 10, 1837. He attended the public school near his home until he was about 12 years old, when he entered the school at Lewisburg, where he studied for 2 or 3 years. When he was about fifteen his father sent him to some preparatory school in the lower Shenandoah Valley, but he remained there only one year and was never in school again.

At the age of 24 he entered the Confederate Army. His company, formed at Lewisburg and known as Captain Frye's Company, was sent directly to the vicinity of Harper's Ferry, where it became a part of Jackson's "Stonewall Brigade" - Company "E", 27th Virginia Infantry.

He was in the following battles: 1st Manassas, Port Republic, Antietam, 2nd Manassas, McDowell, Fredricksburg, Seven Days, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg and the Wilderness. He was wounded at the battle of Fort Republic, June 8, 1862, by a grape shot. The wound was in his left shoulder and was not serious - yet he complained of it in old age. He was captured after the Battle of the Wilderness (Spottsylvania Court House) on May 12, 1864, and was taken immediately to Fort Delaware. In August or September of that year, he, along with 599 other officers, was taken South, under the retaliatory measures of the North, and placed under Confederate fire on Morris Island off the coast of Charleston, S.C. Later this squad was removed to Hilton Head Island, S.C.. Here they were fed nothing but sour corn meal for six long weeks in the dead on winter. In the late winter or early spring of 1865, the survivors of the Immortal Six Hundred were taken back to Fort Delaware. Alfred Edgar was held there until the 17th of June 1865.

He married Lydia McNeel on June 16, 1875. They spent their married life at the brick house, Mt. Airy, near Hillsboro. He died in 1913. His wife died in 1919.

THE MCNEEL FAMILY

John McNeel, the ancestor of the McNeels in Pocahontas county, appears to have been the first to occupy the Little Levels by permanent settlement. He was a native of Frederick county, Virginia, but passed much of his early life in Cumberland, Maryland. He seems to have been athletic and in a pugilistic contest injured his opponent so severely that the injuries were regarded as fatal. He fled and spent a long time in the solitude of the Alleghenies. He came in view of the Levels in 1765. Here he built his cabin and brooded over the blow he supposed to be on his hands. One day, while hunting, he met Charles and Edward Kinnison from his old home. These two gave him the good news that he had not killed nor even seriously injured his boxing opponent.

He soon made a trip home and brought back as his bride Martha Davis, who was born in Wales in 1740. Martha Davis was a Calvinistic Methodist and brought to her mountain home as part of her dowry, a Bible printed in Welsh - said to be the first west of the Alleghenies.

In a few years the Dunmore War started. John McNeel went on the expedition to Point Pleasant. While absent, a child was born and died before his return. Martha Davis prepared the coffin and grave and buried her child. These were the first burial rites at the McNeel graveyard.

John McNeel, upon his return from Point Pleasant, enlisted in a company from Frederick county and served in the Revolution.

He was a man of wonderful sincerity of character and strength of purpose. He and his wife build the "White Pole Church" - a Methodist church.

Isaac McNeel married Rachel McKeevor. One of their children was Colonel Paul McNeel. Paul was born in 1803 and went to live with his grandparents at an early age. He was greatly influenced by his grandfather and was one of the most widely known citizens of his day. He possessed an immense landed estate, was for years a leading member of the court, sheriff of the county, and was a member of the Virginia convention that passed the Ordinance of Secession. He was married to Rachel Cameron See from near Huttonsville.

THE WARWICK FAMILY

Lieutenant Warwick came to Augusta county from Williamsburg, Virginia, during colonial times - 1740-50. He was in the service of the British Crown and was employed in surveying and locating land grants in Pocahontas county. He was one of the English gentry whose families settled in Virginia for political reasons. (See Thackeray's Virginians) He located and occupied the Dunmore property for his own use and married Elizabeth Dunlap, near Middlebrook. Some time later he returned to England and was not heard from again.

His son was Jacob Warwick. Jacob inherited his father's estate and married a Miss Vance from North Carolina. The children of this marriage were born at Dunmore. Jacob Warwick accumulated much land and cattle and horses. In addition to the Dunmore land there was a large tract on the Jackson's River and land at Clover Lick. It was at Clover Lick that the family finally settled building a large house that it might be used for preaching services. Mrs. Warwick was a pious woman who loved to entertain ministers. Her domestic discipline was rigid, but effective. She was tall, slender, blue-eyed, lithe and agile. She was also highly emotional and benevolent. Mrs. Warwick gathered the first Sabbath School ever taught in Pocahontas County. This school was a continuous session of five hours and left her too exhausted to mount her horse without assistance. Four weeks before her death she received Communion and became so emotionally upset that she never recovered. She was buried at Clover Lick without any sort of services.

Jacob Warwick was an Indian fighter, although he was never sure of having killed but one Indian. His services were in frequent demand by land agents and surveyors because of his knowledge of the mountains. Upon one trip away from home he returned to find that an Indian raid had been made - the row of cabins had been burned, the premises ransacked, all feathers plucked from the chickens,, and the wagon burned - the first wagon to have crossed the mountains.

He was in the expedition to Joint Pleasant, probably in the company commanded by Captain Mathews. It is said that he played an important part in that battle.

One of the daughters of Jacob Warwick was Margaret who married Adam See of Huttonsville, Randolph county. Adam See was a well-known lawyer, an extensive landowner, an influential citizen and a ruling elder in his church. Among their children was a daughter, Rachel Cameron See who married Paul McFee of Pocahontas county.

THE MATHEWS FAMILY

Sir Mathew ap Jevan of Llandaff married Janet, daughter of Sir Jenkyn Fleming of Penolyn, and from these descend all those that bear the name of Mathew in any of its forms, i.e. Mathow, Matthew, Mathews, Matthews, Mathewson, Mathewson. His descendants were long deemed feudal barons, receiving summonses, as Barons, to attend the Sovereign with horses and arms on various occasions. Sir David Mathew of Llandaff, their oddest son, was one of the most distinguished men of his age, and was made Grand Standard Bearer of England by King Edward IV, whose life he is said to have saved - though he was far advanced in years - at the battle of Tewton, on Palm Sunday, 1461. His tomb, ornamented with his full length figure in alabaster, in Mathews Chapel of the Llandaff Cathedral (which has ever since been the property of the Mathews family) is one of the most interesting extant monuments of that day. Sir David was the progenitor of various lines of Mathews.

Robert Mathew, second son of Sir Mathew ap Jevan, married Alice, heiress of Castell-y-Mynach, and Daughter of Jenkyn Thomas ap Evan David of Pont-y-Corred ap Llewelyn ychan ap Llewelyn ap Cynfrig, Lord of Llanthrithyd ap Howill ap Madoc, Lord of Ruthven, ap Jestyn.

Sir William Mathew, of Castell-y-Mynach, married Margaret, daughter of Sir John Gamage of Coyty.

Sir Robert Mathew, of Castell-y-Mynach, (said to be living in 1535 - if son quite advanced in age) married Alice, daughter and heir of John Thomas ap Thomas of Pont-y-Corred ap Evan David ap Llewelyn ychan from Madoc ap Jestyn. Robert Mathew was also called of Pencod and Llanthrithyd.

John Mathews (2nd son to above) married Eleanor Crofton of Ludlow.

Tobias Mathews, Fifty-sixth Archbishop of York, brought up at Christchurch, Oxford, D.D. Rose by perferment. First Archdeacon of Wells; Priest of St. John's College, Oxford; Canon and Dean of Christchurch; Dean of Durham; and, lastly, Archbishop of York, September 11, 1606. Born 1546, Died 1623. Married Francis, daughter of William Barlow, the widow of a bishop and mother of two more bishops. She and Tobias had two daughters and three sons - Sir Tobias, John and Samuel Mathews, born 1592, died March 13, 1660.

Sent to the Colony of Virginia by King James, 1622. Was one of the five commissioners to examine conditions of Virginia, 1623. Liked it so well he remained. Was a member of the Colonial Council, 1624-1644; a Commissioner of Warwick River, 1631; elected governor of the colony by the House of Burgesses, December, 1656; deposed by same authority in 1658 and immediately re-elected; held office until his death. He was married first to the daughter of Sir Thomas Hinton, who was mother of his sons: second, to the widow of Abraham Tiercy. His landed possessions were large, one of his plantations being called "Flous de Hundred", and another "Mathews Manor" and afterwards Denbeigh. It was from the latter that the county seat of Warwick county, Virginia took its name - it occupying the site of the plantation.

Samuel Mathews, eldest son, was Lieutenant Colonel of Militia in 1655 and a member of the Assembly from Warwick county in 1652. In 1655 he was a member of the Colonial Council.

John Mathews lived at Denbeigh. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Michael Tavernor, of York county.

Samuel Mathews, a Captain of Colonial Militia, signs himself on a bond dated 1706 as of St. Stephen's Parish, King and Queen county. He married three times: first, Miss Braxton, mother of John; second, Katherine Dunstall, no issue; Margaret, whose son died without issue.

John Mathews left the eastern part of Virginia and settled between 1730 and 1737 in the District of West Augusta, now Rockbridge county, near the Natural Bridge in the fork of the James. He was elected a vestryman in 1746, along with his brother-in-law, John Archer. In 1742 he was in command of a company of Augusta County Militia. He was a Captain of the Militia during the French and Indian War and was in Braddock's Campaign. He married Anne Archer, daughter of Sampson Archer of Gilmores Spring. Archer was also a Lieutenant in the French and Indian War.

Archer Mathews was the youngest son of Captain John Mathews. He moved to Greenbrier county about 1780, where he owned much land. In 1782 he was one of the trustees who formed the town of Lewisburg. He married Letitia McClanahan.

Anne Mathews, their second child, married Captain Thomas Edgar.

THE HOWE FAMILY

There are difficulties in the way of tracing this family to its English origin. Tradition has to be largely relied upon; and this, as presented by different branches of the family, differs as to the first of the family that crossed the Atlantic, and as to the first place of Settlement. One statement is that a Joseph How, belonging to a family of that name long domiciled in Massachusetts, enlisted and served as a soldier in the French and Indian War, in which he was supposed to have been lost. But, afterwards, he was found in the New River Valley, where later he added the letter "e" to the name. This information is taken from the "Howe Mass."

Joseph Howe, an English gentleman, first cousin of Lord Howe and General Wayne, came to America in 1737. On board the vessel that brought him over was a beautiful and captivating girl, Eleanor Dunbar. The two fell in love and married soon after landing and settled in Boston. They drifted southward and finally settled in the rugged regions of southwestern Virginia. They made their home on Back Creek in 1757 or 1758. This homestead is still in the possession of the family in the person of Mrs. Agnes Howe DeJarnette.

Daniel Howe was an officer in the Revolutionary War. He was a man of strong mind and high character. He married Nancy Haven. He was often on detached service in search of Tories. The story is told that he was on a small boat on a creek was suspect. Major Howe was sent on several occasions to arrest him, but was unable. Finally, a pretty, black-eyed daughter of Haven, whose name was Nancy, caught the Major and became his wife. One of their ten children was Elizabeth, who married Colonel George Neeley Fearis. Nancy Fearis, daughter of Elizabeth and George Fearis, married Archer Edgar.

THE FEARIS FAMILY

The ancestors of this family were Huguenots, who fled from France, stopping temporarily in Barbadoes, thence about 1710 to South Carolina. Here they located on an island about five miles from Port Royal, to which they gave the name "Farris Island." (Various spellings - Fearis, Farris, Farris and Fearis.) The settler was Alexander Fearis, who became a distinguished man.

Judge McGrady, in his History of South Carolina under the Proprietary Government, 1670-1719, gives considerable prominence to Col. Alexander Fearis, who was Commissioner of Free Schools, Commissioner for Building Churches, Member of the House of Commons (Col. Wm. Rhett, Speaker), a military officer, one of the judges to try pirates, and commander of the militia in the Revolution of 1719. Col. Alexander Fearis had a son, Alexander, who made some conveyance of property in 1722-26. Alexander Fearis, Jr., had a son, John Alexander, who likewise had a son John Alexander, as shown by his will probated in August, 1752. The last mentioned John Alexander had a son Robert, who died about 1781. Robert's daughter Malinda married Samuel Pepper and moved to the New River valley before 1770 and located at the place where he later established Pepper's Ferry. George and Robert Alexander Fearis, his brothers-in-law, went with him.

At that time there lived in that neighborhood a gentleman named Joseph Howe. Howe had some pretty daughters. Both George and Robert Alexander married Howes. Robert Alexander and his wife removed to the vicinity of Paris, Ky.

George Fearis remained in the vicinity of Pepper's Ferry until the spring of 1782. Before this he had been made a captain in one of the militia companies of Montgomery county.

On the advance of the British Army into the Carolinas in the fall of 1780, there was a Tory uprising in Surry county, North Carolina. The uprising was of such formidable proportions as to impel Gen. Martin Armstrong, commanding that military district, to call on Major Joseph Cloyd (Montgomery county militia) to aid in its suppression. About the first of October, 1780, Major Cloyd with three companies of mounted men - one under command of Capt. Geo. Fearis - marched to the State of North Carolina. Here they were joined by militia of that state, making a force of about 160 men.

with which he attacked the Tories at Shallow Ford of the Yadkin on October 14, defeating them with a loss of 15 killed and a few wounded. Major Cloyd had one killed and several wounded. Among the wounded was Capt. Pearis, who had a severe shoulder wound. This fight cleared the way for the crossing of Gen. Green's army. Capt. Pearis returned home wounded. His wife died a few days after his return on November 14. Disabled from further service, Capt. Pearis removed in the spring of 1782 to his land on the New River. (This land had been purchased from Capt. Wm. Ingles about 1779 for seventy pounds sterling and contained 204 acres.) Here is now situated Pearisburg station. He later established a ferry, kept a small stock of goods and later an "ordinary". On October 5, 1784, he married Rebecca Clay, daughter of Mitchell Clay. One of their children was Colonel George Neeley Pearis who married Elizabeth Howe, daughter of Major Daniel Howe. One of their children was Nancy, who married Archer Edgar.

The elder George Pearis was long a magistrate of Montgomery and Giles counties; sat in the courts of both counties; and was, for a term, magistrate of Giles. The first court of the latter county was held in a house belonging to him. The land for the county buildings and town was given by him and from him Pearisburg took its name. He died November 4, 1810 and was buried on his farm, on the hill southwest of Pearisburg station.

There are some branches about which nothing is known now. These are the Davis family, the Archers, the Clays the Havens and the Dunbars.

This material was taken from that of Mr. Russel H. Clarke, New Market, Virginia; Charles Stewart Mathews of Mathews, Louisiana; Price's History of Pocahontas County; Greenbrier Pioneers and Their Homes by Ruth Woods Dayton; Judge George W. McClintic's History of the Edgar Family; and the notes of Allan P. Edgar.
